Homegrown is a new conference exploring how faith is grown at home. How can we encourage families and households to nurture faith together, and to spur each other on as they encounter Jesus and faith in everyday life? This event offers opportunities for both theological reflection and practical equipping.

There are three ways to take part in Homegrown:

1. Watch live on Tuesday 8 October, 9.30am-2.30pm. This is an event for those supporting and working with families to learn more about how faith is grown at home. Join in from anywhere and take part in the online conversation via social media.

2. Be in the audience! A 24-hour event hosted by Cliff College on Tuesday 8 and Wednesday 9 October (includes an overnight stay), with additional content to the live-streamed conference. Find more information and how to book on the event webpage.

3. Join a special evening session on Tuesday 8 October, 8.00-9.30pm, to equip parents and carers to grow faith at home with children and young people.

This event is delivered in collaboration with Parenting for Faith and Care for the Family's initiatives, the Kitchen Table Project and Who Let The Dads Out?

Start thinking now about who you want to gather with for this day of learning about faith at home. The event webpage has a list of venues hosting the event so why not check if there's one near you? Find out more about the exciting programme, speakers and the topics they'll be covering, plus ways to engage parents and carers, at www.methodist.org.uk/homegrown.
